Management's discussion of fund performance

The fund's Class A shares gained 12.02% for the year ended July 31, 2024. That result compares with a 16.02% gain for the 65%/35% S&P 500 Index/Bloomberg U.S. Aggregate Index. What factors influenced results

During the fund's fiscal year, the U.S. economy saw robust growth, driven by a rise in business investment, consumer spending and government expenditure. Slight declines in inflation and a modest softening of the labor market led to expectations that the U.S. Federal Reserve might cut interest rates, but this did not occur during the period; bond yields remained higher as a result.

The portfolio's holdings in the financial and industrial sectors saw returns higher than that of the overall portfolio during the period. Conversely, the highest yielding equities saw returns below that of the overall portfolio, though it is worth noting that the dividends paid remain a critical part of the fund's income objective. Similarly, the fund's bond holdings helped support the fund's income objective, but also provided a measure of stability when equity markets were volatile. The fund's position in health care equities saw a negative return for the period. Holdings in consumer staples and telecommunications recorded positive returns but were below the overall portfolio return.

How a hypothetical $10,000 investment has grown

Figures reflect deduction of the maximum sales charge and assume reinvestment of dividends and capital gains.
