Management's discussion of fund performance

The fund's Class 529-T shares gained 12.69% for the year ended July 31, 2025. That result compares with a 11.81% gain for the 65%/35% S&P 500 Index/Bloomberg U.S. Aggregate Index.

What factors influenced results

U.S. equities posted strong gains despite volatility in 2025, supported by a resilient economy and easing inflation. After a sharp April decline triggered by global trade tensions, markets rebounded to new highs by June, namely in the technology sector. Robust growth in communication services, financials and utilities also supported overall gains. European equities rallied on cooling inflation, European Central Bank rate cuts and German fiscal reforms. The financials and industrials sectors led gains, though trade tensions and geopolitical risks at times dampened investor sentiment. The U.S. bond market saw turbulence from Fed rate cuts and tariff uncertainty, with early rallies reversing as long-term yields rose on fiscal deficit concerns.

Within the fund, most sectors added to the fund's positive results with information technology, financials and industrials holdings particularly additive. Consumer staples and communication services shares were also positive, though below the portfolio's overall return. Geographically, shares of companies based in the Pacific excluding Japan, emerging markets and Canada had some of the highest returns in the portfolio. The fund's bond holdings also had positive returns, while helping support the fund's income objective and maintaining a measure of stability when equity markets were volatile.

In terms of detractors, holdings in the real estate and energy sectors saw negative returns during the period. Also, investments in companies based in other European regions and Japan, while still positive, detracted from the broader portfolio's return.

How a hypothetical $10,000 investment has grown
