Management's discussion of fund performance

The fund's Class R-4 shares gained 10.56% for the year ended October 31, 2025. That result compares with a 10.83% gain for the S&P Target Date Retirement Income Index. For information on returns for additional periods, including the fund lifetime, please refer to capitalgroup.com/mutual-fund-returns-R4.

What factors influenced results

U.S. equities continued to climb for the period, despite volatility early in the year amid tariff concerns. Information technology led gains for the S&P 500 Index. Meanwhile, international equities, as measured by the MSCI All Country World ex USA Index, outpaced U.S. equities. In U.S. fixed income, the Bloomberg U.S. Aggregate, Bloomberg U.S. Corporate Investment Grade and Bloomberg U.S. Corporate High Yield 2% Issuer Capped indexes all rose sharply. Signs of labor market weakness and broader economic uncertainty prompted the U.S. Federal Reserve (Fed) to cut interest rates in September and October 2025 despite potential inflation risks. Balanced and equity-income funds were the strongest absolute contributors. Non-U.S. stocks held in the portfolio were stronger than U.S. equities on an absolute basis. Overall, information technology stocks had the strongest absolute returns among sectors. Fixed income holdings were positive overall, with investments in high yield, government-related debt, corporate bonds and securitized debt posting the highest absolute gains.

In equity sectors, investments in real estate posted the lowest absolute returns but nonetheless ended the period in positive territory.

How a hypothetical $10,000 investment has grown

Figures assume reinvestment of dividends and capital gains.
