What factors influenced results

U.S. equities posted strong gains over the fund's fiscal year, rebounding from early 2025 volatility and propelling the S&P 500 Index to new all-time highs. Non-U.S. equity markets also delivered robust returns, buoyed by a weaker dollar and substantial earnings in key regions. The U.S. fixed income market delivered solid results, with corporate bond spreads tightening to their lowest levels in nearly three decades. Although inflation rose slightly, influenced by lingering tariff effects, signs of labor market weakness and broader economic uncertainty prompted the U.S. Federal Reserve to cut interest rates in September and October 2025.

The portfolio saw positive absolute returns over the fiscal year. Non-U.S. equity holdings were top returners, partly driven by Canada- and U.K.-based investments. The modest fixed income portfolio also saw positive returns, owing in part to considerable positioning and returns in emerging markets debt.

While U.S. equities – the portfolio's most significant exposure – provided a positive absolute return, they trailed their non-U.S. counterparts amid economic uncertainty. The lowest returning sectors for the fund included health care and energy. Fixed income returns lagged equities but helped to fulfill their roles seeking volatility management and diversification from equities.
