Management's discussion of fund performance

The fund's Class T shares lost 0.31% for the year ended December 31, 2024. That result compares with a 1.25% gain for the Bloomberg U.S. Aggregate Index.

For the year ended December 31, 2024, the fund's distributions exceeded total taxable income resulting in a return of capital for tax purposes. For additional information, please refer to 2024 year-end distributions | Capital Group.

What factors influenced results

During the fund's fiscal year, the U.S. Federal Reserve (Fed) lowered its policy rate three times. Following its first rate cut in September 2024, the Fed made additional rate reductions in November and December. While ultra-short bond yields have fallen significantly since the Fed's initial rate cut, longer term yields have increased. The upward trend in long-term yields reflected the bond market's expectations for stronger U.S. economic growth.

The fund's interest rate positioning contributed positively to relative returns. Being underweight duration for most of the first half of the year helped returns as rates rose. Positioning to benefit from the yield curve steepening also proved beneficial to the fund's relative returns. The curve began steepening in June as markets prepared for the Fed to begin its interest rate cutting cycle, resulting in the end of the curve's long-running inversion.

The fund's defensive positioning in sector allocation was a drag on relative returns. In particular, the hedging of credit risk in investment grade (IG) and high yield (HY) corporate bond markets was a detractor. Spreads for both IG and HY corporates narrowed in 2024, helped by positive fundamentals, interest rate cuts from the Fed and the anticipation of pro-business policies from the incoming administration.
