What factors influenced results

Emerging markets bonds posted strong gains, supported by U.S. rate cuts and a weaker dollar. European yields climbed amid a global sell-off toward the end of the year, which was sparked by rising Japanese yields. The euro, British pound and Mexican peso strengthened, while the Argentine peso and Indian rupee declined.

Sector allocation and security selection contributed to relative results. Country/market allocation decisions added to relative returns, driven primarily by duration management. From a country perspective, off-benchmark positions in Brazilian government bonds benefitted results. Currency positioning contributed to comparative results, supported by gains from unhedged currency exposures and currency-hedging activities.

At the broad level, curve positioning weighed on relative returns over the period. Underweight positions in Japanese and Chinese government bonds, as well as select non-benchmark positions, detracted from results. Finally, underweight positions in uniform mortgage-backed securities and U.S. Treasuries, which outperformed over the period, were a detriment to results.

How a hypothetical $10,000 investment has grown

Figures assume reinvestment of dividends and capital gains.

At no point during the fund's fiscal years ended December 31, 2024 and December 31, 2025 and the subsequent interim period through February 11, 2026, were there any disagreements between management and D&T on any matter of accounting principles or practices, financial statement disclosure or auditing scope or procedure.
