Management's discussion of fund performance

The fund's Class 1 shares gained 15.62% for the year ended December 31, 2024. That result compares with a 14.44% gain for the S&P Target Date 2060 Index. For information on returns for additional periods, including the fund lifetime, please refer to capitalgroup.com/AFIS-returns-1.

What factors influenced results

During the fund's fiscal year, U.S. economic growth remained solid, driven by strong consumer spending, despite uncertainties of the presidential election, high interest rates and a slowing labor market. Overseas, Europe and Japan saw modest growth while the UK economy contracted in the three months to November. Among emerging economies, China faced stagnant consumption, a property crisis and rising debt. Conversely, India showed resilience with strong growth and robust investment, though it struggled with inflation. A majority of the fund held domestic equities which contributed greatly to the fund's return for the period, with communication services, information technology and financials being particularly additive. Likewise, utilities and consumer discretionary saw returns surpassing those of the overall U.S. equities. Industrials and consumer staples shares were also positive, though below the domestic equities' overall return.

Conversely, fixed income holdings generated negative returns, primarily driven by positioning in emerging markets debt and U.S. Treasuries. Also, equities domiciled overseas detracted from the broader portfolio's return as materials, utilities and healthcare holdings weighed on the positive impacts of information technology and communication services sectors.
