Management's discussion of fund performance

The fund's Class 1A shares gained 8.48% for the year ended December 31, 2024. That result compares with a 7.25% gain for the S&P Target Date 2015 Index.

What factors influenced results

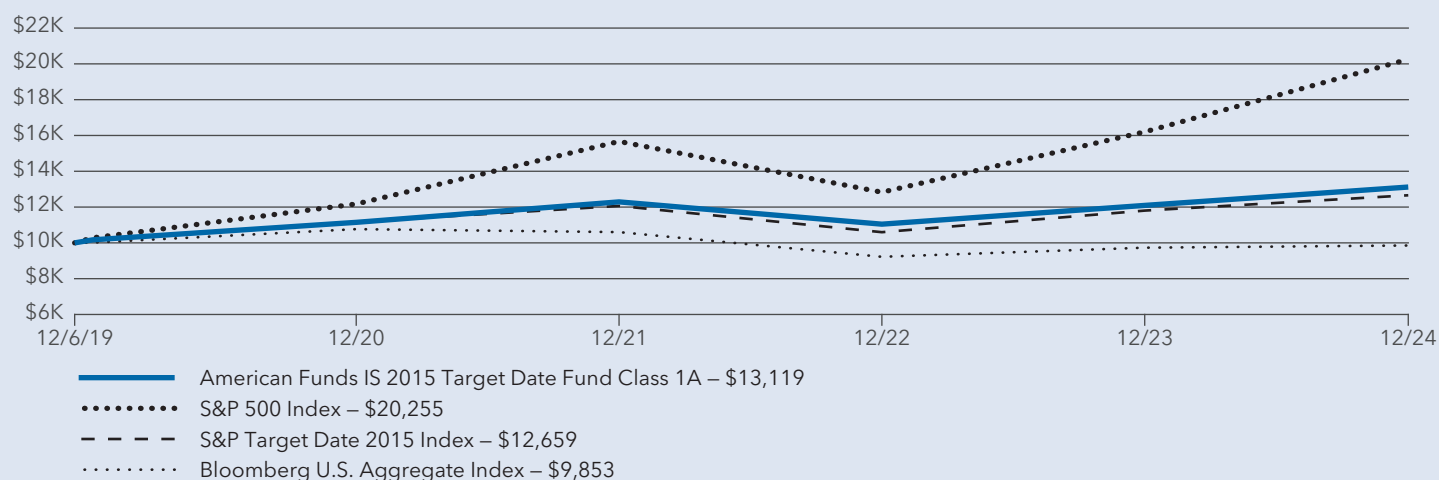

During the fund's fiscal year, U.S. economic growth remained solid, driven by strong consumer spending, despite uncertainties of the presidential election, high interest rates and a slowing labor market. In September, the U.S. Federal Reserve cut rates for the first time since 2020 and followed with additional reductions in November and December. Short-term bond yields declined while longer term yields rose.

Overall, domestic equity returns substantially surpassed those of the overall portfolio, with holdings in information technology, financials and communication services being particularly additive. Likewise, utilities and industrials sectors saw returns surpassing those of the overall U.S. equities. Holdings in consumer discretionary and consumer staples were also meaningful contributors despite lagging the domestic equities' absolute return.

The fund's bond holdings provided stability and income, however their positive returns were below those of the overall portfolio. Within overseas equities, materials, real estate, healthcare and utilities holdings weighed on the positive impacts of the information technology and financials sectors.
