Management's discussion of fund performance

The fund's Class 2 shares gained 9.13% for the year ended December 31, 2024. That result compares with a 8.44% gain for the S&P Target Date 2025 Index.

What factors influenced results

During the fund's fiscal year, U.S. economic growth remained solid, driven by strong consumer spending, despite uncertainties of the presidential election, high interest rates and a slowing labor market. In September, the U.S. Federal Reserve cut rates for the first time since 2020 and followed with additional reductions in November and December. Short-term bond yields declined while longer term yields rose.

The portfolio's domestic equity holdings, particularly driven by information technology, communication services and financials sectors, offered strong positive returns for the fiscal year. Likewise, utilities, industrials and consumer discretionary sectors saw returns above those of the overall U.S. equities. Consumer staples holdings were also additive, though below the domestic equities' overall return.

In general, bond holdings saw lower returns than the portfolio's total result, though they continue to offer opportunities for stability and income. Investments in overseas equities detracted somewhat from the broader portfolio's return while remaining positive. Within overseas equities, materials and real estate holdings were the notable detractors.
