Management's discussion of fund performance

The fund's Class 1A shares gained 20.42% for the year ended December 31, 2025. That result compares with a 17.73% gain for the 70%/30% MSCI All Country World Index/Bloomberg U.S. Aggregate Index. ### What factors influenced results

Global equities surged in 2025, overcoming trade tensions and geopolitical volatility. All major equity markets delivered solid returns, led by the eurozone and the United Kingdom. U.S. stocks advanced (albeit by less than international equities), led by continued growth of large-cap technology companies. Major central banks, including the U.S. Federal Reserve, cut rates as inflation generally eased. Global bonds rallied on U.S. rate-cut expectations and a weakening U.S. dollar. Simultaneously, the U.S. fixed income market posted strong gains, supported by corporate bonds.

Overall, equities contributed meaningfully to the portfolio's absolute returns, particularly within the financials and information technology sectors. While stocks domiciled overseas outpaced domestic ones, they remained a smaller portion of the portfolio than U.S. equities.

The fund's bond holdings, while providing income and stability, delivered smaller gains. Securitized debt, emerging markets debt and corporates were the largest detractors from absolute returns.

How a hypothetical $10,000 investment has grown

Figures assume reinvestment of dividends and capital gains.
