What factors influenced results

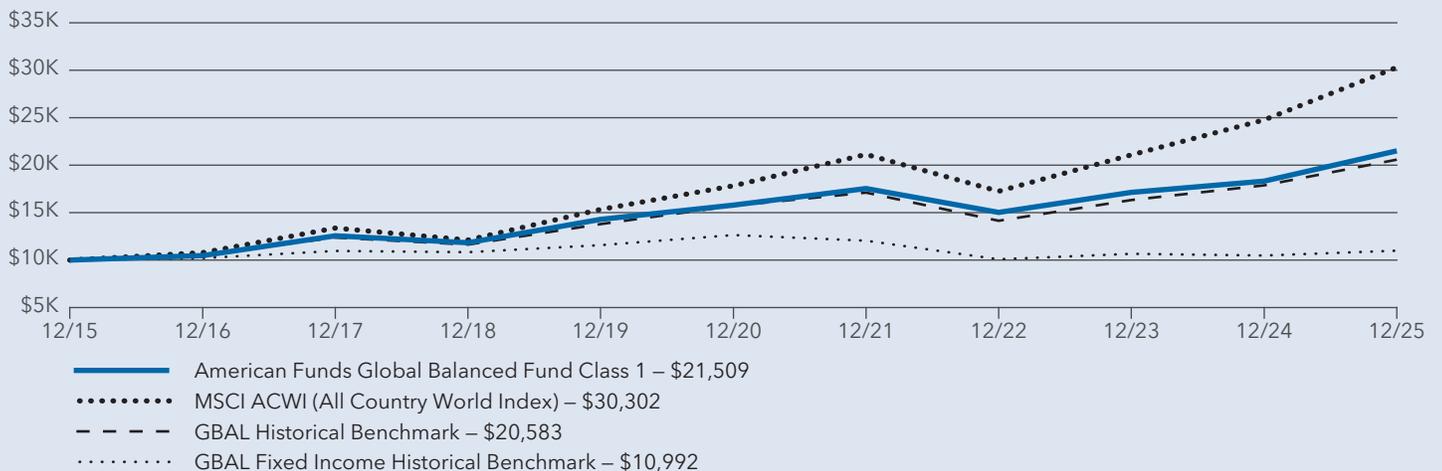

Global equities surged in 2025, overcoming trade tensions and geopolitical volatility. All major regions delivered solid returns, led by Europe, emerging markets and Asia Pacific. U.S. stocks advanced on strong large cap technology growth, but lost momentum later in the year. Major central banks, including the Federal Reserve, cut rates. Global bonds rallied on expectations of additional U.S. rate cuts and a weaker U.S. dollar, while U.S. fixed income delivered strong gains, supported by corporate bonds.

The fund's overall results were driven by overseas equities, which provided robust returns for the period. Stocks in the Eurozone and United Kingdom had particularly high returns. Although domestic equities lagged international markets, they remained an important contributor to absolute returns. On a sector basis, financials and industrials led the way.

Fixed income represented nearly one-third of portfolio holdings. While returns trailed equities, the allocation offered a measure of balance and helped mitigate volatility during periods of market stress. Emerging markets debt and investment grade corporates posted strong gains, whereas Treasuries weighed on results.

Changes in and disagreements with accountants

On December 10, 2025, PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP ("PwC") was dismissed and Deloitte & Touche LLP was appointed as the fund's independent registered public accounting firm for the fiscal year ending December 31, 2026 audit. The change in the fund's independent registered public accounting firm was approved by the fund's board of trustees, including a majority of the independent trustees, upon recommendation of the audit committee, as part of a broader effort to update board oversight and fund operations. At no point during the fund's fiscal years ended December 31, 2024 and December 31, 2025 and the subsequent interim period through February 13, 2026, were there any disagreements between management and PwC on any matter of accounting principles or practices, financial statement disclosure or auditing scope or procedure.
