What factors influenced results

Global equity markets delivered strong gains in 2025, overcoming trade tensions and geopolitical volatility. European equities advanced on easing inflation and improving confidence, with Germany driving growth through major infrastructure and defense investments. Stocks in the U.K. and Japan benefited from accommodative monetary policies and fiscal stimulus measures. Emerging markets also rallied, with strong returns from South Korea, Taiwan and China, while India remained relatively flat despite solid macroeconomic fundamentals.

All sectors of the fund contributed positively to the overall portfolio, with financials, industrials, information technology and materials being particularly additive. Returns from the consumer staples and energy sectors were also positive, though below the portfolio's overall return. Geographically, investments in the United Kingdom, France and Germany made meaningful contributions to overall results.

In contrast, holdings in consumer discretionary and health care, though still positive, lagged the broader portfolio's return. Country-wise, holdings in Denmark, the Philippines and Indonesia were the most notable detractors on absolute results.
