What factors influenced results

U.S. small- and mid-cap equities were resilient during the fund's fiscal year, bouncing back from turbulence in early 2025. After a strong 2024, the Russell 2500 Index dipped in the first quarter, along with the broader market, but rebounded by the end of the period. The U.S. economy returned to growth in the second quarter of 2025, recovering from the previous quarter's contraction, due to a surge in imports ahead of new tariffs. This expansion was supported by an increase in government spending and consumer resilience. Inflation rose toward the end of the fiscal year, indicating a modest tariff impact and reinforcing expectations for potential near-term Federal Reserve rate cuts.

Within the fund, most sectors added positive returns to the overall portfolio, with communication services being the most additive. Likewise, financials, consumer staples, information technology and industrials holdings also saw returns surpass those of the overall portfolio. Energy, consumer discretionary and utilities sectors had more modest gains.

In terms of detractors, holdings in the real estate, health care and materials sectors saw negative returns during the period.
